A composite score of 138 is at the 50th Percentile Rank

YOUR COMPOSITE SCORE AND PERCENTILE RANKS

Your Composite Score	Your Percentile Rank
210	73

YOUR SECTION SCORES AND PERCENTILE RANKS

Subject Test	Your Percent Correct	Your Percentile Rank
Verbal (50 scored questions)	76%	84
Math (40 scored questions)	58%	47
Science (55 scored questions)	73%	79

Your Composite Score represents the total score you earned on the exam on a scale of 0-300. It is computed as the sum of all three of your subject tests' Percentile Rank Scores. For example, if your percentile ranks are Verbal (54), Math (41), and Science (33), your percentile rank is computed as $54 + 41 + 33 = 128$.

Norming Group is a group of examinees whose performance on an exam provides the basis for comparing other examinees' performance. In 2022, the norm group was comprised of all 10,887 examinees taking the same exam items that appear on the NEX.

Your Percentile Rank is a comparison of your score to the scores of students taking the same exam items during 2022 (N = 10,887). It represents the percentage of students who scored as well as or lower than you. The higher the percentile rank, the better you performed on the test overall compared to your peers. A common percentile rank to use for comparison is the median, or 50th percentile rank. Based on the 2022 norm group, a composite score of 138 is at the 50th percentile rank. Your institution will decide what score they want you to achieve.
